

Teach me
Your ways,
O Lord . . .

The readings today aim to focus our minds on an overall view of life's purpose so as to encourage us to live on a more spiritual level. We are on an earthly pilgrimage and have within us deep-seated longings for a better world. At journey's end we are hoping for an everlasting happiness, for a bright dawn to emerge out of our present darkness. What is important to remember is that our own death spells the end of our particular world. At that moment, life's mission is accomplished and we go forward to meet Christ face to face. It may happen at any time and we've got to be prepared for the encounter. While we cannot avoid a sudden death, we can take steps against an unprepared death by living each day carefully as if it is our last and by keeping God ever in our sights.

LITTLE BLUE BOOK FOR ADVENT

The Circle of Friends will be selling the "Little Blue Book". Daily reflections for Advent and the Christmas Seasons in the narthex after each Mass this weekend for $3.50 each. What a wonderful way to celebrate the Advent and Christmas season with a six-minute reflection.

GOD'S GENEROSITY

Many years ago, I read a book by an Irish Nun who was blessed to witness many miracles in her life. One thing she wrote that has stayed with me ever since is that God cannot be outdone in generosity. No matter what we do for God he always outdoes our actions by many times.

This was the case a couple weeks ago at a First Communion retreat. It was a small group so we divided them into three groups. We try to let them stay with their friends so we permitted a group of five energetic boys to stay together. I led them into the sacristy and could soon tell that they were in no mood to listen or sit still. When I would get one to calm down another would begin to wind up and so on and so forth. At one point I was trying to share with them the meaning of the vestments to little avail and I worried if they would learn anything on the retreat.

I continued with the boys and over time they calmed down a little bit. I then met with the second group and closed with the last group of four children.

I brought the last group into the church and we sat close to the tabernacle. Instead of doing all the talking as I had done with the previous two groups, I decided I would let them take the lead so I asked them how often they attended church. Each of them shared that their families did not attend very often so I asked them how it felt to be sitting in the church now. What they shared completely shocked me. Innocently enough and without trying to win my praise the first child told me that he felt like Jesus was tugging on his heart. The second said she felt peaceful and quiet. The third said she felt Jesus was watching over her as she prayed and the fourth said he felt like he had come home. I was deeply moved by their spontaneous responses and my heart was filled with joy. I was so stressed trying to teach them about the faith and here they were teaching me. They knew one thing instinctively and that was how it felt to be in the presence of Christ.

Through their sharing God responded to my insecurities revealing yet again that he cannot be outdone in generosity, he reminded me that he is alive and well, dwelling in everyone and filled my heart with gratitude for being able to journey with the children and Jesus on their paths to reconciliation and communion.
