Teach me Your ways, O Lord . . .

Jesus sees nothing wrong with the disciples wanting to be first, provided they know that to be first among his followers they must consider themselves last and beneath all others. To rule is to serve and to be first is to be last. Many of today's problems could be resolved easier if only people were able to curb their ambitions and see their work as a service to people in the community. If ambitions get out of control, it can lead to an unhealthy mix of greed, jealousy, envy and resentment among individuals. The words of this gospel passage give us a fresh opportunity to reflect on the type of disciple we are striving to become. When we serve those who are most in need we come closest to what Christian leadership means.

WHY YOU SHOULD HAVE THE COURAGE TO SPEAK ABOUT YOUR FAITH

It is getting more and more difficult to openly and freely live a Christian life in today's social environment. Catholics can freely worship, send their kids to Catholic school, and privately pray. Isn't this good enough? Imagine for a moment that I only ever expressed my love for my family in the privacy of my own home and never in public; I never held my wife's hand or played with my daughters in public. I can already tell you what my wife would say: "Are you ashamed of me and the girls!?"

Don't Be Ashamed

I am of course not ashamed of my family. I love talking about my family, showing pictures of my daughters, playing with them and going on dates with my wife. I have learned that the public witness of our family brings joy to many. We have come across the occasional "Grouchy Smurf," but they are few.

If we are not ashamed to publicly express our love for our families, why are we so hesitant to express our love of Jesus? Jesus is asking us, "Are you ashamed of me?" I think most of us can honestly say we are not ashamed of Jesus, but he does challenge our societal mood and can bring offense to some "Grouchy Smurfs." Our societal tendency to take offense can easily discourage us from publicly expressing our faith (or having authentic discussion in general).

Are You In Love?

When we're in love, offending someone is the last thing on our minds. If someone misinterprets it as "showing off," to be blunt, I don't care. I also have the same attitude with my Catholic faith. I love sharing how our family's Catholic faith has affected our marriage: We pray as a family (yes, in public too), we remain open to kids by not using contraception, and we sometimes sit with homeless people and share a coffee. I don't share this to "show off," but simply to express how my faith has affected my life.

Here is the reality. I think our world is in increasing in "Grouchy Smurfs." As a result, if we openly express our relationship with Jesus, we will receive backlash. However, this is nothing new. In the book of Wisdom the author expresses how the righteous were persecuted (see Wisdom 2:12-20). Jesus was also to put to death because the "grouchy" political and religious authorities found offense in his message. Remember, Jesus never incited hatred or violence; he peacefully shared a message that pierced people's comfort; still he was killed.

Next time you're out for lunch with co-workers or grabbing coffee with a friend will you openly share your faith?
