Each one of us is a sanctuary of the living God, housing his love within our hearts. If everyone we meet is a dwelling place of the Holy Spirit, we cannot confine God to a particular time, to something the human mind can conceive and control. We worship God not just in church on a Sunday morning, but by behaving well and treating each other kindly. The gospel challenges us as to where God is to be found in our lives and what type of home we have made for him. Is it a sacred place, a tabernacle where he is honoured and loved? Are we comfortable with Jesus as our guest? Maybe we have grown careless, limiting our worship of God to Sunday mornings in a church building and for the rest of the week are caught up in the worship of false gods in the marketplace! Unknown to ourselves, our hearts can become so cluttered with all types of distractions. Lent provides us with an opportunity to take time out and reflect on what is of central importance in our hearts and minds. It urges us to clarify our priorities and bring the gospel into everyday living. To avail ourselves of an environment of love, truth and hope which absolutely necessary for growth in the spirit, we may have to ask Christ to cleanse our inner selves as he did the temple.
