Marriage is, and always has been, a fragile institution. When Jesus upheld the permanence of marriage, he was going against the popular opinion of his time. It is clear from his teaching that he expected the highest of standards in marriage, as in everything else. Christ never promised that marriage would be a lifetime of romance and bliss as, for all its great joys, it is an immensely difficult enterprise. Like all great tasks and all great callings, marriage is no easy choosing. It is a serious undertaking and anyone carrying around a notion of marriage bringing instant happiness is going to feel shortchanged. Marriage is also a tried and tested way in which children grow up feeling loved as well as providing the stability and security that they need. No other setting has proven better for the nourishing and flourishing of children.
